Dr. Eric Robins (Los Angeles)

"A case involved a family friend who has advanced scleroderma, an autoimmune disease affecting the connective tissues of the body. The skin of the hands gets thick and tight. The esophagus can scar and become blocked, making swallowing difficult. And the lungs can also develop scar tissue, making breathing difficult. When I first started seeing M.G. for Pranic Healing, she was experiencing marked shortness of breath with minimal exertion. After walking up the one flight of stairs to her second floor apartment, she would literally collapse on the floor for half an hour to catch her breath. Additionally, she had stiff and painful joints, making extended walking difficult. After one Pranic Healing treatment, she experienced dramatic relief in her joint pain and her fatigue. It was easier to breathe, and her energy level exploded. She remarked to me after the first treatment that her life had changed to such an extent that she now runs up the stairs to her second floor apartment and then turns on the music to dance.

Perhaps my most dramatic case was that of J.M. He wasn't my patient, nor was he referred to me, but I had seen his name up on the roster of our surgical ward for so long that I decided to introduce myself. He had had a surgery to remove his gallbladder many months before this, and unfortunately had suffered some significant complications, including an injury to his common bile duct. After this injury, he required several more major surgical explorations. And as frequently happens with complex cases, once things start going really wrong with the body, they seem to escalate. The patient developed multiple enterocutaneous fistulae (this means that intestinal fluid was leaking out through the skin of his abdominal wall); yeast sepsis (a very serious condition, fatal nearly 70% of the time, in which yeast grows in the blood); and a pulmonary embolism (a blood clot in the lungs, fatal nearly 60% of the time). He also had been having daily fever spikes for the past six weeks, and months of constant nausea and vomiting. No one thought that he was going to live past Christmas. It seemed to me in simplistic terms that the patient's energy level was low, his batteries were depleted, and he could no longer heal himself. Most of what was going wrong was a symptom of this. I began to apply Pranic Healingsm daily. Within two days, his fever and nausea disappeared. Within one week his pulse rate decreased from the 150 range to the 120 range. He eventually got strong enough to tolerate a final surgery to repair his fistulae, and went on to make a full recovery."

"I have been using PRANIC HEALINGsm in a standard medical practice for almost a year. It has been used to effectively treat migraine headaches, labyrinthitis, chronic bladder pain, menstrual cramps, anxiety, insomnia, irritable bowel syndrome, and musculoskeletal problems. It has worked well on postoperative patients to help them get return of bowel function, and a return to feeling "normal again". It has proven to be an excellent complement to my standard practice of allopathic medicine."
